

Re-Authoring the World Workshops in Pretoria, South Africa

Re-authoring the World Workshop

Discover and learn how taken-for-granted ideas and beliefs shape and maintain our world and how our acts of refusal and protest bring the gift of the alternative

What is it about? In our two days together, we will explore how what we take for granted in our societies are created, supported and sustained. We will focus on the following themes and questions:

- Discover and learn how to work with taken-for-granted ideas and beliefs
- Learn how to work with the influence of taken-for-granted beliefs and ideas
- Discover the joy of acts of refusal and protest
- Discover and learn how to give the competing alternative narratives an opportunity in a world that says: "This is just the way it is!"

Where? Pretoria @ 233 Kandelaar Avenue, La Montagne.

Who should attend? Leaders, managers, HR and OD practitioners, coaching professionals, educators, social workers, facilitators of group-work, activists and healthcare professionals.

How will we learn? In this workshop we learn through conversation and the movement between content and life experiences. The learning experience seeks to ignite the beauty and dignity of all who participates.

The cost: R2000 per workshop that includes a copy of the Re-authoring the World book, a light lunch, tea/coffee and snacks

And there is more: This workshop is one in a series of six workshops that can be attended as a whole or separately. These workshops address the most important themes of re-authoring ideas and practices over a 7-month period. The workshops are designed to be stand-alone experiences of learning so that participants can enter the journey at any point without feeling excluded. If you are interested in integrating the re-authoring ideas and practices into your life and work, you can also take part in an apprentice journey that will run simultaneously to the workshop mentioned above.

The Facilitator: Chené Swart is a Narrative Consultant & Coach who completed her studies in Narrative Therapy in 2006 and has successfully translated the work for the organisational context in the form of practices, designs, processes, workshops and key note presentations. She works internationally and is the author of the book, Re-authoring the World. In more recent years, Chené has started to train organisational consultants coaches and leaders in re-authoring practices in South Africa, the USA, Russia and Belgium through apprentice journeys.
